

MARTY YORK

TCAA

BELOVED SANDLOT ACTOR AND STORYTELLER

BIO

Marty York is an American actor best known as Alan "Yeah-Yeah" McClennan in The Sandlot, one of the most celebrated coming-of-age films in American cinema. Born in Auburn, California in 1980, he discovered acting through community theater and built a career rooted in screen work and live audience connections.

HIGHLIGHTS

After landing the role of Yeah-Yeah, Marty trained in baseball under the film's coach — the grandfather of co-star Squints — bringing authenticity to one of the most quoted casts of the era. He went on to appear in Boy Meets World and remains a fixture at reunions, fan conventions, and anniversary celebrations that continue to unite The Sandlot generation.
